

Börkur Sigurbjörnsson

The sign

flash fiction

Urban Volcano

The sign

Börkur Sigurbjörnsson

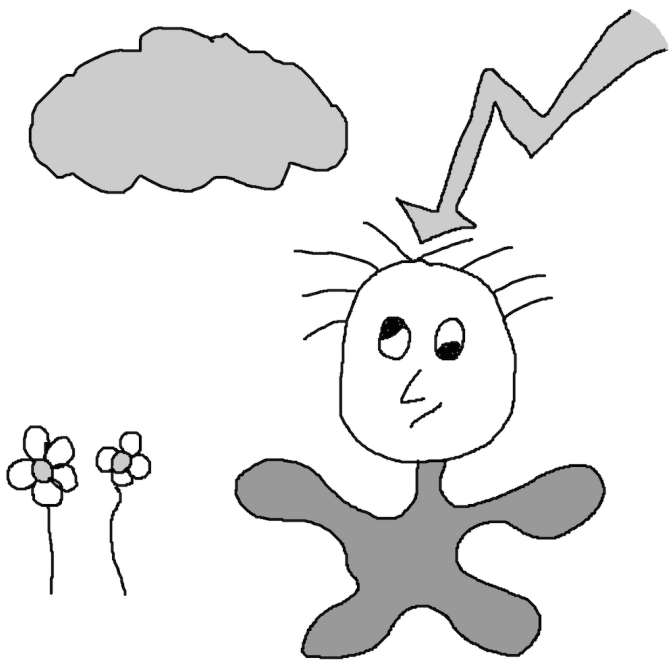

Creative Commons (BY-NC-ND) – 2017
<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/3.0/>

Illustrations: Börkur Sigurbjörnsson

Publisher: Urban Volcano

<https://urbanvolcano.net/>

This story can be reproduced by whichever means one can think of, such as, but not limited to, photocopying, yodeling, or reading aloud on Oxford Street on a rainy autumn afternoon, provided that the author is referenced, the content is not modified and the reproduction is not done commercially.

The sign

I regretted having asked God for a sign. I wasn't seeing things any clearer now than I had done before. I was just as confused. Maybe I still felt dizzy after being struck by a lightning, but I did not dare to ask God for further elaboration.

About The Author

Börkur is an avid storyteller with a keen eye for quirky characters, funny dialogs and vivid scenario descriptions. Much of his writing falls within the genre of realistic fiction and his stories are more often than not based on real events in the author's life. Although the tales contain grains of truth, they are melded with fiction, making the reader curious to know the line between reality and fantasy.

Books

Among Other Things, flash fiction (2024)

Talk To Strangers, short stories (2019)

Flash 52, flash fiction (2017)

999 Abroad, short stories (2012)

Links

Börkur Sigurbjörnsson

Urban Volcano